Contributions to WFP have increased in recent years, and in 2020 we reached a record level of US$8.4bn – still more than 5 billion short of requirements.

Rising needs aligned to the high cost of assisting people amidst drawn-out conflicts, climate-related disasters and the coronavirus pandemic mean we need increased financial support more than ever.

WFP is the world’s largest humanitarian agency, assisting 115.5 million people in 84 countries in 2020.

Each day we have up to 5,600 trucks, 30 ships and 100 planes on the move, delivering food and other assistance in some of the most remote and challenging parts of the world.

Contributions to WFP have increased in recent years, and in 2020 we reached a record level of US$8.4bn – still more than 5 billion short of requirements. Rising needs aligned to the high cost of assisting people amidst drawn-out conflicts, climate-related disasters and the coronavirus pandemic mean we need increased financial support more than ever.

WFP is the frontline agency responding to emergencies caused by conflict, climate shocks, pandemics and other disasters. We are tackling ongoing emergencies in 17 countries or regions, the majority fuelled by conflict.

WFP is helping 19 countries to forecast extreme climate events and trigger preventive action before vulnerable families are hit by disasters. Cash transfers ahead of floods, droughts and storms allow people in harm’s way to evacuate assets and livestock, reinforce homesteads and buy food, seeds and emergency items so they are better prepared to deal with a food crisis.

More than three quarters of the food we buy comes from developing countries, saving time and money on transport costs and helping sustain and grow local economies.

WFP is the largest cash provider in the humanitarian community. US$2.1bn of assistance was provided this way in 67 countries in 2020. Cash increases consumer choice and strengthens local markets.

More than 50% of the people WFP serves are women and girls.