2	Strengthening awareness about the importance of micronutrient rich plants through promotion of Green School Garden approach which	Accepted	Starting from March 2016 WFP no longer conducted direct programme implementation to the beneficiary, this included the phase-out of LFBSM. Under the new CP 200914 2016-2020 WFP Indonesia was conducting capacity development & augmentation to the Government of Indonesia. Learning from the success of WFP Indonesia in implementing LFBSM, the Government of Indonesia through the Ministry of Education has adopted the holistic approach of LFBSM to its national school meal programme (PROGAS). Since March 2016, WFP Indonesia has provided various

This technical assistance covered: targeting, designing guidelines, developing meal recipes, designing IEC materials, training of trainers, and developing monitoring tools.
3	Improving activities for health and nutrition promotion using local language and involving association of teacher and parents	Accepted	WFP Indonesia continued to advocate the local governments in NTT and Papua (the two provinces where LFBSM were implemented) to allocate their local budget to continue LFBSM implementation in their respective areas. The government in NTT province (Kupang district) has agreed to allocate their budget.  To enhance the sustainability of school meal programme in Indonesia, WFP continued to embrace non-government state, such as the private sector to participate in implementing school meal programme. In 2016,

Since LFBSM had a wider objective for community and local development, strengthening farmer groups capacities including reducing crop failures which leads to an increase in the price of agriculture products should be undertaken.	Accepted	WFP commenced a partnership with Cargill to introduce PROGAS in two districts.
