

Operational Context

Once an upper middle-income country, albeit hosting the largest number of refugees per capita in the world, Lebanon is now in its third year of a severe economic, political, and social crisis. The geopolitical developments in 2022, particularly the recent hike in international fuel prices, are adding to the already dire situation and ongoing inflation in Lebanon.

The human impact of these crises is sobering. In 2021, both the Lebanese and refugees suffered from high levels of poverty and food insecurity. Taking into account vulnerability criteria not limited to monetary poverty, such as food insecurity, 54 percent of the Lebanese (2.1 million people) were found to be vulnerable and in need of assistance in 2021. Food insecurity alone reached 46 percent of Lebanese by the end of 2021.

The multiple crises also had a very negative impact on the 1.5 million Syrian refugees in Lebanon. Since 2020, 88 percent of Syrian refugees (1.3 million people) were extremely poor and in need of assistance and half of the Syrian refugee population was food insecure in 2021.

WFP remains at the forefront of the humanitarian response to Lebanon's crisis, supporting 2.1 million of the most vulnerable Lebanese and refugees in 2021 to meet their food and other essential needs.

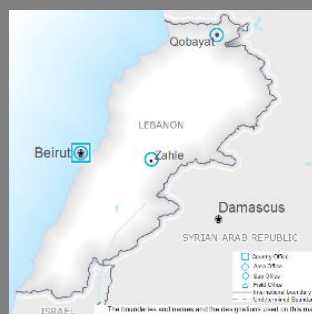

The Lebanon Country Strategic Plan (CSP) for 2018 – 2022 positions WFP as a major partner of the Government and other United Nations agencies towards the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals. WFP is developing the new CSP for the next three years to articulate its strategy and priorities to respond to the increased needs in Lebanon. The new CSP will remain aligned with the Government-endorsed Lebanon Crisis Response Plan (2017–2022), the United Nations Strategic Framework (2017–2022), and Lebanon National Agriculture Strategy (2020 – 2025).

A Story Worth Telling

Laure is the sole provider for her family of five.

When people her age are beginning to think about retirement, Laure seems to be far from it. Laure is the sole provider for a family of five: her 2 sons, her 2 elderly parents, and herself. As she approaches the age of 60, she is still determined, though out of necessity, to work hard in order to provide for her loved ones. “You have to push through life. You cannot give up,” she explains. “You have to work hard in order to survive.”

Despite her hard-working ethic, Laure continues to suffer from the dire economic situation of the country. The pandemic forced her previous employers to let her go after over 20 years. She is currently working as a daily wage labourer with an income barely sufficient for one person, let alone her whole family. In order to assist Laure and her family, WFP is providing her with a monthly food parcel that covers a large portion of her family’s nutritional needs.

“If it wasn’t for the food parcel, we would have been doing much worse,” says Laure, whose family relies heavily on ingredients from the in-kind parcel, especially the rice, pasta, beans, and oil. These ingredients are occasionally complemented by whatever vegetables Laure can afford with her small salary.
